Patient Health Information

Under federal law, your patient health information is protected and confidential. Patient health information includes information about your symptoms, test results, diagnosis, treatment, and related medical information. Your health information also includes payment, billing, and insurance information.

How We Use Your Patient Health Information

We use health information about you for treatment, to obtain payment, for administrative purposes, for evaluation of the quality of care, and so forth. Under some circumstances, we may be required to use or disclose information even without your consent.

Treatment: We will use and disclose your health information to provide you with medical treatment or services. We may also disclose the information to other health care providers who are participating in your treatment and to family members who are helping with your care, and so forth.

Payment: We will use and disclose your health information for payment purposes. For example, we may need to obtain authorization from your insurance company before providing certain types of treatment. We will submit bills and maintain records of payments from your health plan.

Administrative: We may ask you to complete a sign-in sheet or staff member may ask you the reason of your visit so we can better care for you. Despite safeguards, it is always possible in a healthcare provider's office that you may learn information regarding other patients or they may inadvertently learn something about you. In all such cases, we expect our patients to maintain strict confidentiality.

We may use and disclose your health information to perform various routine functions (e.g. quality evaluations or records analysis). We may use your information to contact you. We may also contact you to provide information about referrals, for follow-up, to inquire about your health, or for other reasons.

Special Situations

We may use or disclose identifiable health information about you for other reasons, even without your permission.

Legal: We may be required by law to report suspected abuse or neglect, and so on; we may be required to disclose vital statistics, diseases, and similar information to public health authorities. We may be required to disclose information in response to a subpoena or court order, or as required by law enforcement officials. We may disclose information to protect your health or the health of others or for legitimate government needs, for approved medical research, or to certain entities in cases of death. In some situations, we may ask for your written authorization before using or disclosing any identifiable health information about you. If you sign an authorization, you can later revoke that authorization.

Individual Rights

You have certain rights with regard to your health information, for example: You may request restrictions on certain uses and disclosures of your health information, though we are not required to agree to such restrictions. You may ask us to communicate with you confidentially by, for example, sending notices to a special address.

In most cases, you have the right to get a copy of your health information. There will be a charge for the copies. If you believe information in your record is incorrect, or if important information is missing, you have the right to request that we amend the existing information.
